

The Claretian Echo

VOLUME 2: ISSUE 35

FEBRUARY 15TH 2013

St Clarets GFC: Big enough to cope, small enough to care

It's A Wynnemill

Mossie in a mess

Claretian die-hards were quick to rally around popular Mayo man Eamonn Collieran last week, following an unfortunate incident during a club social gathering.

Party lightweight Collieran, otherwise known as Mossie, was caught short during a marathon drinking binge in Shepherd's Bush and left a telling trail of evidence in his wake.

However, a group of ever-supportive Claretian players were quick to his aid by bringing the beleaguered Mossie a seat to rest on, while they cleared up the unfortunate mess.

Mossie: the sign says it all

However, with construction industry H&S gurus Steven Sherry and John Kelly in close proximity, the Claretians made sure to warn the public to give the Mossie a wide berth.

Entrepreneurial Claretian Pat Queally was last week delighted to be able to announce the launch of his brand new energy creating system, the Wynnemill.

The invention, which Queally claims will help reduce the average household energy bill by 95% per annum, is due to go on sale next month.

At a recent beer-fuelled St Clar-ets gathering, the opportunistic Queally attempted to procure some external investment for his newly established trading company QUIDS-IN (Queally's Un-Intentionally Designed Systems Incorporated).

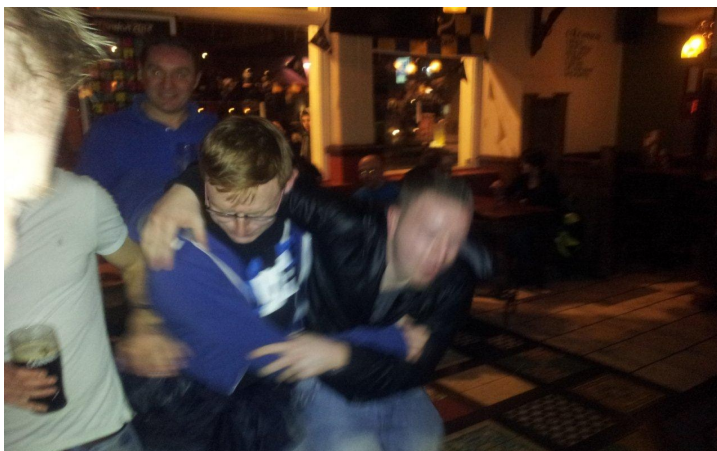

Using the only Wynne available at the time, Claretian good-guy Gary, former dance champion Queally grabbed hold of the bemused Fermanagh man and began to spin him around at great speed, thus generating, what Queally claimed to be "sufficient energy from the centrifugal force created, to provide more than enough power for the average three bedroom house".

Following on from his impressive demonstration, Queally answered questions from his fellow Claretians and assured them that any member of the Wynne family would do, and that it didn't necessarily have to be Gary.

Meanwhile, Gary himself was unavailable for interview after the demonstration, as he was throwing-up in the toilets.

Queally's firm QUIDS-IN are offering entry level investment in this exciting new project at just £5000, for a 1% stake in the company.

Queally (left) using Gary Wynne to help demonstrate the Wynnemill

Healy focusing on rest and recovery

Leading figures within St Clarets have expressed concern about the attitude of tenacious defender Matt Healy during pre-season training.

Healy, is rumoured to be so confident of his selection for the team, that he is skipping training sessions in order to catch a quick forty-winks.

When questioned, Healy told The Echo, that the reason for his naps had more to do with the volume of training he was doing and his need to recharge his batteries.

However one observer suggested that maybe Healy was instead preparing for his role on the subs bench in 2013.

Meanwhile, Healy's boss Steven Sherry said that he was unaware of any significant change in Matt's behaviour at work, as he'd seemed to spend most of the past 18-months asleep anyway.

Training hard: fans catch Healy during pre-season training.