

The Claretian Echo

You ain't been anythinged until you've been Echoed

VOLUME 2: ISSUE 53

JUNE 19TH 2013

The Echo: We only tell you lies because you couldn't handle the truth.

Mac seeks new man-chum

Stand by me: Sean Mc man-chumming

Claretians have been scrambling to impress club legend John McDermott as he seeks appointments for two key positions in his empire. This move follows the dramatic departure of Gary Wynne as Mac's constant "Plus One" in recent weeks and the resignation of Mike Shea last year as family au pair.

McDermott advertised the roles recently and interest has been high. At present it seems that Sean McCarthy is being given a trial in Wynne's former role as Mac's special "man-friend".

Meanwhile, having failed to convince

Mac of his credibility as a "man-chum" Matt Healy has posted this picture on Facebook of him surrounded by children as he bids for the MacNanny role.

Nanny McHealy: Matt's keen on kid role.

Three-in-a-bed shock

Charity do-gooder Paddy Donaghy was left stunned last week when he returned from yet another marathon charity fundraising effort only to find that he had been kicked out of the marital bed by wife Nicola and replaced by two younger, far more handsome and charming models.

Sources close to the family say the only surprise is that it took Nicola so long to make the decision.

No room at the inn for the charity king

Gerri's gone Dutch

Claretians were stunned last week to learn that injured player Ger O'Sullivan has decided to leave London and take up permanent residence in Amsterdam's red-light district.

The Corkman, has been commuting between the two cities in recent months as he mastered the ropes in his new career, but has finally decided to make the move full-time.

Ger has spent the past six months learning the tricks of the oldest trade in the world and Geri can now accept callers any day between 8am and 8pm at his booth in Old Amsterdam.

Gerri in the shop window