The New Calendar Girls

Kavan Fitz-Perky

Wanna-be glamour model Kavan Fitzpatrick has undertaken drastic action to help realise his dreams of modelling super-stardom.

The Claretian newcomer tweeted pictures of himself looking very perky (above) after his breast surgery.

Looks like we'll be needing those new super-stretchy jerseys next year after all.

Emotions are running high amongst the mothers of the St Clarets Under 16 footballers this week.

Following their recent daring pose at Ruislip, the mothers have been approached about doing a new risqué calendar, designed to rival the success of the one featured in the film Calendar Girls.

While most of the ladies are said to be keen on the idea of baring almost everything in the name of St Clarets, it is rumoured that there have been some heated exchanges behind the scenes, as the debate begins about who may be cast to play each mum should a film be made of the project.

Leading Hollywood producers and agents have been called in at this very early stage to try and re-assure the mothers that Tinseltown's A-List will be made available for them when the moment comes to start filming.

The question remains though whether any Hollywood star can match up to these mums.

Legendary storm brewing

St Clarets GFC is this week at the centre of a legal storm in Ireland, after two of the club's members appeared on the "London Legends" team in a recent game against Mayo.

Patrons at the Castlebar fixture were outraged when they saw both Tony Murphy and Gerry Lynott make appearances for the London team, despite neither of them qualifying for legendary status. As one irate punter put it: "If those two are legends in London, then I'm a pig's trotter."

Unless a full refund of the €1 admission is received by Friday of this week, the six people who turned up to watch the game are threatening to take the battle to the High Court in Dublin.

However, the one dog who turned up was quite happy though, as he found a pig's trotter to chew on.
