

The Claretian Echo

The paper Rupert Murdoch reads

VOLUME 3: ISSUE 82

JUNE 18TH 2014

"The truth doesn't always set you free; people prefer to believe prettier, neatly wrapped lies"

Feet first for Sherry

Tiger tweets

Charles McGrath has received support from Tiger Woods following the recent episode involving him, his wife Kerry and a shovel. (Echo 81).

Charles McGrath

McGrath met Woods at a recent Ryder Cup day and afterwards received a flurry of Twitter sympathy from the world No. 1.

"That shovel gotta hurt Chaz #remember2duck" Woods tweeted before adding later: "Your bike got smashed more than my Escalade".

A rather offended McGrath replied "She never touched the bike."

Sharing pain: Woods

St Clarets manager Steve Sherry has confessed to The Echo that he is fighting an on-going battle in trying to figure out the best pose to strike during games.

Having considered several possibilities, including using an umbrella while standing on the sideline, Sherry eventually narrowed his options down to four possibilities.

His first choice was to do the "crouching tiger" pose favoured by AVB, but the Portuguese tactician's track record was off-putting for Sherry, who has designs on creating an empire at St Clarets.

Meanwhile, Jose Mourinho's sliding around on his knees act was immediately dismissed by Daniella Sherry, because she wasn't prepared to wash grass stains from Steve's trousers every week.

Sherry: making plans or dreaming of feet?

He also considered "doing a Rafa", by sitting Buddha-like on the touch line, but felt that he might get attacked by Patrick Lynott if he copied the former Liverpool boss.

Finally, Steve has settled on his own take on Rafa's pose, by adding a slightly straightened leg to the stance, thus providing more stability.

Commenting on the decision, Sherry told The Echo: "I like to study the foot movements of my players. It helps me to understand how the game is developing and then make tactical adjustments."

Or maybe he just has a foot fetish! Who knows?

Crouching tiger: AVB

Slip sliding: Mourinho

Buddha-pose: Rafa

Dishy Donaghy

Paddy Donaghy received an unexpected Father's Day gift from wife Nicola, when he was enrolled in a house-keeping course which promised to turn even the most hopeless case into a domestic god. Sadly Donaghy proved too big a challenge for the experts and instead he was sent to stay with brother-in-law Colin, to see if Catherine could knock him into shape.

Paddy learns about dishwashers