Keano caught in coup collusion

Keane filmed in secret talks with Lord "Rolly" Lucan

Claretian photographer Colin Keane has been caught in a CCTV bust that threatens the unity of the club.

Former player Keane, 54, was filmed conducting secret meetings with influential Claretians, believed to be aimed at over-throwing the current senior team management pair of Steve Sherry and Tadhg Lee.

In what has been dubbed "Snapper-gate" by the sports tabloids, Keane is understood to have been seeking the support of several top people within the club, with current Vice-Chairman Mick Keane (also Colin's father), believed to be backing his son's power-grab.

More telling though has been the involvement of Claretian mystery man, the elusive Lord "Rolly" Lucan, whose approval Keane attempted to gain during a secret meeting last week. Rolly is said to want time to consider.

Keane's plan is to play himself at full forward, with forwards Pat Lynott and Eamonn Hughes having already been told by Keane that they won't be required in 2015.

When asked about this recent development, Chairman John Kelly said: "Sadly Colin has got that many dodgy photos of so many of us, we just have to let him do as he pleases. He's not the sort of man you mess with."

Col's castle collapses

Shocking recently discovered pictures of Colin Keane's final apprenticeship project have led to a flurry of concerned former customers contacting the Trading Standards Board.

Photos have emerged of Keane (above), a self-titled "Master Craftsman", hard at work during his college days in Great Yarmouth, where he claims to have studied construction for four years.

We will let you form your own opinion on that course!

CK in shock Taliban link

Claretians were stunned this week when video emerged of club snapper Colin Keane taking part in a secret Taliban training camp in Ickenham. Footage shows Keane receiving water-boarding training from two high ranking Taliban operatives.

Such was the intensity of the training, Ruislip Lido had to be closed for a week in order for water levels in the reservoir to be replenished. When quizzed about the video, Keane (right) claimed that the pair were simply trying to find out where he had put the remote for the TV.
