Heartbroken Healy heads to Hove

John O'Dowd's heartbreaking Facebook post

After weeks of intense speculation, the truth about Matt Healy's sudden move to Hove has been revealed.

The rumour mill went into overdrive after defender Healy inexplicably decided to swap Hayes for Hove.

However, a Facebook revelation last week by Healy's fellow corner back John O'Dowd declaring that he was now involved "in a relationship" with someone (other than Healy), has lifted the lid on Matt's devastation.

Prior to the announcement,

O'Dowd and Healy were said to be inseparable with Healy regularly referring to his team mate as "Mi media naranja" an old Spanish saying meaning that the other person is the half orange that makes you a full orange.

Following O'Dowd's Facebook posting, heartbroken Healy tweeted from Brighton beach this week: "I feel like a Bette Midler song coming on #windbeneathmywings" before adding later: "I thought we were for ever #devastatedinSussex."

Lynott blows it

Claretian Pat Lynott has hit out angrily at club supporters who have claimed that he is always blowing his own trumpet.

A furious Lynott took to Twitter last week, declaring war on his detractors, before adding: "Never blown a trumpet in my life. Disgusted by allegations. Only thing I blow on is my didgeridoo #breatheandblow."

Tunnel Vision

Finally, after 168 driving lessons and five years of coaxing, Claretian Luke Kelly's learner driver ambitions were finally realised on his 22nd birthday last week with a poignant gift from his family.

His proud parents acknowledged the progress that Luke (left) has made in trying to gain his licence by buying him a new pair of shoes and a leather Oyster card holder, personally inscribed by Mayor of London, Boris Johnson with the words: "Thanks Luke, you're loyalty is appreciated by all TFL workers -BoJo"

Luke's mother Teresa told The Echo: "From the first moment I put him in the passenger seat as a baby, he seemed so happy there. We just figured he'd make more use of a pair of shoes than anything to do with a car."
